The Al Khaleej newspaper saw the light of the day in 1970 under the Late Taryam Omran and his brother, the Late Dr Abdullah Omran Taryam. Al Khaleej has always defended all national and Arab issues and supported rights everywhere. That has and will remain its signature mission.

Since its inception, Al Khaleej has been keen to set an example of distinguished administrative work and to get to the top of the journalistic ladder. Over the years, it has experienced a remarkable development, and after releasing the first issue in 8 pages, it is issued now in manypages of fourparts: Al Khaleej 1, Al Khaleej 2, Al Khaleej Al Iqtisadi, and Al Khaleej Al Riyadi.

Besides, Dar Al Khaleej Press, Printing & Publishing issues the English-language daily newspaper, "The Gulf Today", and a range of weekly appendixes namely, Al Osbou' Al Siyasi, Istirahat Al Osbou, Qadaya Wafonoon, Shabab Al Khaleej, Al Mulhaq Al Thaqafi, Le Monde Diplomatique, Al Din Lil Hayah, in addition to weekly publications Kul Al Usra magazine, Al Shurooq magazine, Al Sehha Wal Tib magazine, and the "Panorama" magazine, issued by The Gulf Today.

The monthly publications of Dar Al Khaleej include the Al Iqtisadi magazine, Al Azkiyaa magazine, as well as "Kitab fee Jareeda" supplement and the " Al Sa'em" magazine, which is published every year during the Holy month of Ramadan.

The Al Khaleej Studies Centre was founded by Dar Al Khaleej Printing and Publishing in mid 1980, after the "Al Khaleej" newspaper was back in print (April, 1980). The Centre evolved from a small department for studies to become a specialized unit in 1999. In 2004, the unit was further developed to become Al Khaleej Studies Centre. The Centre specializes in issuing books, researches and reports. It also organizes specialized scientific, cultural and intellectual symposiums, as well as a conference that is annually held every May.

The Distribution Department is considered the first to enter the profession of the distribution of newspapers and magazines in the United Arab Emirates, while the Advertising and Marketing Department is considered one of the fundamental pillars of work in Dar Al Khaleej, and it constitutes a vital sourceofactivity.
